POLICE CRIME REPORT

MOVE OVER MARYLAND

First responders and road-workers are in a riskier position than you may think when they must stop alongside a roadway. Maryland's "Move Over" law is designed to protect them.

As a motorist in Maryland, you are already obligated to move over for emergency, law enforcement, utility, and transportation vehicles when they're stopped and have their lights flashing.

This coming October, this law will expand.

Motorists will now be required to make a lane change or slow down when they see any vehicle displaying warning signals – including warning lights, road-flares, traffic cones, or caution signs.

Learn more about the expansion in our law by visiting MDOT's Zero Deaths Maryland by clicking here.
